

The Office of Management and Budget has redesigned Results.gov (www.results.gov) to help Federal employees, Congressional staff, and the public learn more about how the President's Management Agenda is helping the Federal government become more effective and results-oriented

The site includes three new sections:

- Making A Bigger Difference: examples of improved performance, including instances where management and/or employees identify an unacceptable situation and take corrective action resulting in improvements.
- Don't You Agree? Apply to You?: management principles that are key to organizational effectiveness.
- If Only...: Obstacles to greater effectiveness that we want to do something about.

You are encouraged to visit the new site for information on best management practices and examples of how Federal agencies have achieved greater results. Suggestions for achievements that the Department may wish to include may be forwarded to Robin.D.Henderson@hq.doe.gov.