

Please enjoy the December edition of the DOE Workforce Training Newsletter (hold the control key and select the newsletter title). We have designed the newsletter to keep DOE senior executives, managers, supervisors, employees, and the departmental training community informed of training topics relevant to DOE. Our objective is to provide access to shared training resources and enhanced career development tools. We will continue to work with HQ and the field to make it easier for you to access learning and development resources from across the Department and the Government. To accomplish this, we will highlight best training practices; partnerships with other agencies and institutions; and assist managers in meeting their workforce development goals as they deal with major resource and funding challenges. As part of this effort, we will inform you of key dates and provide resources to help employees set professional career goals that will align to our corporate mission.

You can use the underlined links above to navigate directly to the newsletter in Powerpedia. If you experience problems with the link, you can navigate to Powerpedia and search “OLWD” (Office of Learning and Workforce Development) and scroll down to the quarterly newsletters. Powerpedia is a non-public collaboration space that can be accessed by all DOE offices across the nation.
